3. JUDGING: Winners will be selected by National Wildlife Federation no later than February 28, 2010 from among all eligible entries received.

NWF provides categories of judging as inspiration, only. NWF will award five prizes showcasing a broad range of global warming solutions, which may or may not fit neatly within the four categories. The four categories we provide for your inspiration are:

- Green Jobs and Education: Colleges and universities that have green workforce training programs or courses, train students for green jobs, incorporate sustainability ideas across the curriculum, or have added a new graduation requirement fostering student climate and ecological literacy.
- Cutting-Edge Research, Design and Technology: Campus-based research into new designs or technologies that promise to help dramatically reduce global warming pollution on campus and beyond. These projects may be in the pilot phase and may be related to energy, food systems, buildings, transportation, communications or related systems on campus and beyond.

- Students in Action: Students leading efforts on campus and beyond to reduce global warming pollution, ranging from (but not limited to) awareness campaigns to solarizing the student residences.
- Campus Actions in Administration, Operations and Planning: Visionary campus-wide initiatives, stemming from leadership in administration, operations or planning that have directly or indirectly resulted in significant reductions of net campus energy use and carbon-dioxide emissions. Projects can include, but are not limited to, large-scale clean energy installations, shifts in purchasing practices, innovations in planning or finance and more.

An entrant's selection of category is not binding; NWF reserves the right in its sole discretion to judge an entry in any category or to award multiple or no awards in a particular category. NWF will use the same criteria to judge each category. NWF's criteria includes, but is not limited to: Scale and impact of the project in curbing global warming; how well your story can be captured on film; diversity in types/sizes/locations of campuses; education aspect of project, numbers of students and others reached; creativity; unique solution or approach that can be transferable to other campuses or schools; and compliance with these rules.

NWF will award the video prize winner based on peer voting on www.GoGreenTube.com. A person may vote only once. In the interest of preventing ballot stuffing, GoGreenTube.com will allow an IP address to vote only once; however if a person is using a common computer that already voted, GoGreenTube.com and NWF may provide such individual with an alternative, e-mail-based, means of entry. If NWF in its sole discretion determines that an individual has voted multiple times NWF may disqualify and/or void any or all votes it deems to be from that individual. Entries that do not comply with the official rules may be disqualified. All NWF's decisions shall be final and binding.

Peer voting will begin at 8:00am ET February 1, 2010 and end at 8:00am ET March 1, 2010.

All judging will be conducted at National Wildlife Federation's offices, located at 11100 Wildlife Center Drive, Reston, VA 20190. By participating, entrants agree to comply with and be bound by the Official Rules and the decisions of the judges, which shall be final and binding in all respects. Failure to comply with the Official Rules and the decisions of judges may render the entry void. Limit one prize per person, family, household or college.
